

Scientific project will be supported by the Russian Science Foundation

On November 30, 2021, the Russian Science Foundation (RSF) announced the results of the most massive grant competition of small individual scientific groups. Based on the expertise results, the scientific project “Study of the internal structure and dynamics of active geological faults using complex of electromagnetic sounding (on example of the Northern Tien Shan)” (No. 22-27-00567, head leader Dr. Rybin A.K.), which will be carried out by the RS RAS staff.

The RS RAS staff of the is sincerely glad and wishes the team of this project to obtain excellent scientific results, and also congratulates all their colleagues who were included in the list of supported projects based on the results of the 2021 competition for receiving RSF grants in the priority areas “Fundamental scientific research and exploratory research by small individual scientific groups”.

The supported projects will be carried out in 2022-2023 by small research groups (up to 4 researchers). The average size of a grant for a project is 1.49 million roubles per year.

For more details, see the RSF website <https://rscf.ru/news/found/bolee-1800-proektov/>